THE PEOPLE WHO SELL
Up-to-Date Clothing

NOTICE TO GRADUATES AND STUDENTS

We desire to call the attention of the young men of the LaPorte Public Schools to our magnificent department of young men's suits. Nothing like it was ever before seen in LaPorte. We cater especially to young men's trade. Young men are the men. They want their clothing right. They've time to think about their looks. They want swing and snap and style to clothing. Our young men's clothing is the smartest, swaggiest clothing made. Made just like made-to-order clothes. We put good materials, good tailoring, good style, good brains and experience into them. They ought to satisfy every sensible man; they will if you try them. If you will call at our store some day and ask to see our suits, you will see a lot of good things we haven't said about them.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

We have now ready over 20 different lines of fine black suits for commencement or graduation wear. They are the most beautiful suits ever shown in Northern Indiana. We sell a white vest with every black suit. These suits are going to make our clothing famous. We want every graduate to see them.

"Lows"—The clothing that makes LaPorte's good dressers famous

Foreword

THIS is our book. Of its defects we are aware. Of its merits we are uncertain, for it is an experiment in bookmaking, the product of inexperienced hands, and we ask you to judge it leniently. Two things inspired its publication: First, a desire for some permanent memento of our last four years spent in school; and, second, the hope of collecting and preserving, before it became too late, information concerning the Alumni of the LaPorte High School. In this we realize that we have been only partially successful, mainly because of the limited time available in which to secure and authenticate the required data, and somewhat because of the lack of interest on the part of a few of the Alumni who failed to respond to our request for information and photographs. But to the great body of loyal Alumni we are very grateful for the assistance and encouragement so generously given us, and trust that the Alumni department of the book will meet their expectations.

We are indebted to Superintendent John A. Wood for valuable contributions and suggestions, to Mrs. Florence Mayhew for timely assistance rendered, to Principal F. L. Sims for his indefatigable labors in behalf of our book, to our teachers and fellow students for much valuable material and many helpful suggestions, to Mr. G. D. Thomas for his painstaking and patient labors in the photographic work, to the many artists whose contributions embellish our book, and to the class for its loyal and energetic support.

To the school and to a generous public we submit our work, trusting that it will receive their approval.

SCHOOLS
LA PORTE

The LaPorte City Schools

Historical Sketch by Supt. John A. Wood

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS of LaPorte were established under the new school law of 1852, which was made to conform with the radical changes in educational provisions made by the new State Constitution.

In 1856 a public meeting was called at the Court House to discuss whether or not the public school system should be adopted for LaPorte. After earnest discussion of the merits of the Private Schools and Public (called Pauper) Schools, Messrs. Gilbert Hathaway, Amzi Clark and Benj. P. Walker were appointed a board of school trustees to establish the public system. During the same year the little brick ward schools were built, one for each ward of the city. These soon became inadequate for the accommodation of the children and later the board, of which James Moore was president and John B. Niles was secretary, determined to secure an architect and draw up plans for a large building capable of taking in all the children of the city. This much done, they halted and a general election was held for the purpose of determining whether a new building should be constructed. The decision was favorable to building and resulted in the election of Judge W. C. Hannah, president; Rev. G. C. Noyes, secretary, and Lafayette Crane, who was absent on special service in Sanitary Commission of the Army of the Cumberland, was elected treasurer, which position he filled more than seven years.

This board constructed the building now known as the Central Building and on its completion the schools were consolidated.

The schools in the ward buildings had been ungraded and were practically independent, but in 1865, after much argument pro and con, Mr. T. L. Adams, Principal of the Adams' Private Academy, was appointed Superintendent and the graded school system was established. The graded system implies a scheme whereby the pupils are required to pursue a prescribed course of study and are classified according to their attainments.

The printed report of 1869-70 shows that gradation was accomplished only after a determined resistance to the innovation. In this report considerable space was given to arguments for the desirability of the graded system. The report of 1871 called attention to the necessity of refitting and remodeling in the High School Building, now known as the Central Building. In 1872-73 a plea for desks for the primary room was made in the following words, "In the primary schools (of which there are five) there is no school where all the pupils are provided with desks, and in two of them not one is thus provided. In these grades the slate is in almost constant use, and must be held upright in the arm or placed upon the lap—in either case compelling an awkward and unnatural position." The report of the following year shows an adequate supply of desks in primary grades. I dwell thus fully on this point that the present generation may realize the long period of privation necessary for the accumulation of supplies for school work which are so fully and abundantly furnished in our schools.

From the report of 1875 we learn that the system of elocutionary and rhetorical exercises had been in use two years. Music had been in the schools three years, and the course in German extended through six years. Here we see that LaPorte was fully up to the best schools of the country in enriching its curriculum.

The three following reports emphasized the necessity of employing only thoroughly equipped teachers and retaining only thoroughly efficient ones. This points to a high standard for the teaching corps. In 1876 there was much discussion over the question of "Overwork, Home Study, Dissipation, Etc.," and in 1878, two years before the first meeting of the Manual Training department of the National Educational Association, there was a strong plea made for the introduction of Technical—now called Manual Training.

In 1879 "Home Study and Overwork" was again a mooted question. For three years following, the subjects of primary and supplementary reading and English composition were emphasized. In 1882 drawing was introduced as a regular study with Mr. Frank Aborn, of Cleveland, Ohio, as special teacher. The next year brought an earnest endeavor to improve the penmanship work. The school library was added to quite extensively and a creditable library list was published. During the same year the stoves used in many of the buildings were jacketed and so connected with fresh air flues that the ventilation of the rooms was greatly improved.

From 1883 to 1893 was a very prosperous period in the school history of LaPorte. Into the strong and progressive school spirit and work built up by his predecessors Dr. W. N. Hailmann introduced the "New Education;" carrying with it a complete reorganization of the course of study, the incorporation of the kindergarten and manual work, and the arrangement of the work upon the concentric circle plan.

In 1890 the department of Drawing was organized in the high school and Prof. Frederic H. Simons, the present incumbent, was appointed teacher and supervisor of art work. In 1892 the commercial department was organized.

During the year 1894 the present high school building was erected to meet the demands of the schools, caused by the growth in number of pupils and extension in work. In this building ample provision for the future was thought to have been made, when provision was made for one hundred and seventy-five pupils. The present high school enrollment is two hundred and forty-three. This building was erected on the site of the old Indiana Medical College, the account of which is here inserted as it is found in the Indiana Gazeteer, published by E. Chamberlain, Indianapolis, in 1849:

Indiana Medical College

The Medical Department of the LaPorte University was organized in January, 1841, and a course of lectures given by Drs. G. A. Rore, Dan'l Meeker, J. P. Andrew and F. W. Hunt. They commenced with about twelve students, and during the ensuing summer a building was erected capable of accommodating 150 students. The session of 1842 proceeded under the same faculty with the addition of J. B. Niles, A. M., as Professor of Chemistry, and 27 students. After some change of the faculty during the next three years, in which for a time Dr. W. J. Holcomb and Dr. Brown, of Kalamazoo, occupied chairs, a reorganization was effected in 1845 by Drs. Meeker, Richards, Shipman, Knapp, Hurd and J. B. Niles, Esq., and the present name was assumed.

At the close of the session 1846-47, the chair of Materia Medica, previously held by Dr. Knapp, was vacated by the trustees and Dr. E. Deming, of Lafayette, appointed, and Dr. Higby also became one of the faculty. The number of students was 104. Graduates, 27.

The session of 1848-49 commenced under the same faculty, with 100 students. The new college edifice has been completed: large additions have been made to the anatomical museum, as well as to the surgical apparatus, with drawings and other facilities for illustrating the demonstrative branches of medical science. The chemical apparatus is very good, and the experiments for illustrating that branch usually performed before the classes are numerous, accurate and satisfactory.

An association called the North Western Academy of Natural Sciences was formed in 1846 by the faculty, and other friends of general sciences. It has already a large collection of specimens in Geology, Natural History, etc., and a valuable library.

For many years the LaPorte High School has been on the list of Indiana Commissioned High Schools and in the year 1887 the school was entered on the three years accredited list of Michigan University. In 1897 the Commercial Course was extended; the department of English was organized; the school was entered on the accredited list as a co-operating school with Chicago University, and its graduates given privilege of entering the freshman classes without examination. Since 1898 the list of colleges accrediting the work of the schools has grown so as to include practically all schools belonging to the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and also some courses in the Eastern Colleges. The grade styled 8¹², which practically increased the time spent on grade work to nine years below the high school has been abolished; the course of study has been thoroughly reorganized; book contracts have been entered into with dealers to secure great reduction in cost of books and supplies. A book rental plan has been established enabling all who desire so to do to rent the text books necessary for carrying on their work, instead of purchasing them. The seventh and eighth grades of the city have had their work organized on the departmental plan, giving the children the advantage of specialists as their instructors in these classes, and making it possible to organize the departmental and high school classes on the same basis as to program, promotions, electives, etc.

School exhibits, at home and abroad, have displayed the actual products of the pupils' work in such a way as to bring considerable attention and commendation to the schools. A library of nearly 8,000 sheets of mounted pictures, arranged and classified by topics has been collected in the various rooms for the better illustration of the school work, and for the past two years mounted specimens of the work of the various subjects have been mounted in scrap-book form and are preserved in the respective rooms of the different grades for the inspection of patrons, pupils and visiting teachers, and for a true exhibit of the course of study as worked out by the schools.

During this same period, from 1898 to date, quite extensive repairs have been made. Every school building has been thoroughly overhauled; walls cleaned and tinted, and some steel ceilings put in. Cement walks have been put on and around all school grounds, heating plants have been remodeled or new ones installed in all of the large buildings. The high school gymnasium has been established; the school indebtedness has been lifted; the transfer receipts on account of tuition from non-residents have been more than quadrupled, and the libraries and supplementary reading lists have had extensive additions.

The present attendance both in grades and high school has never been equalled in our schools. The teaching corps has been harmonious and a unit in furthering the welfare of the schools and the good work and standing of the schools is attested, at home, by the cordial and loyal support of our citizens, the liberal patronage from non-residents, and abroad, by our unusually large and successful college representation, which includes for the present year fifty-one students in twenty-one different collegiate or technical schools.

LaPorte schools from the earliest days of the private schools up to the present time, have always been held in high esteem both at home and abroad, and it is hoped that our schools may ever deserve and hold an honorable position in the educational world.

Appended are the names of the members of School Boards, Superintendents and High School Principals of LaPorte Public Schools, with the date of service:

The High School Departments

IN a system of schools the size of LaPorte's it is practically impossible to keep a clearly defined separation of the departments in High School work. Even if it were possible from a financial standpoint and practical from the point of class attendance it is still questionable if the general welfare and interests of the whole school could be so well cared for under a scheme when the departments were isolated and the workers in one department have no vital or necessary interest in the workers of another department.

The fact that a teacher acts as head in one department and as assistant in another gives the teacher a double view-point of the school work and compels a social and co-operative spirit frequently wanting in the faculties of higher schools.

Partly by necessity and partly by plan the high school is so arranged, with one exception, that each teacher serves as responsible head in some one line of work and as assistant in another, thus giving a double bond of unity and a greater harmony of action.

The names of those who have served as departmental teachers in the city high schools will be found on pages 113 and 114.

Many of those who have served here as high school teachers have gone on in their professional careers to positions of influence and prominence in state and national educational affairs.

The attendance in the high school during the past decade has more than doubled, while the teaching corps has remained practically the same in number.

To keep pace with the educational progress of the country at large, courses have been modified and extended so that the work of the various departments stands accredited with that of the best schools in the nation.

The LaPorte City High School offers to its students four years' work in each of the following lines:

English, Science, Commercial Branches, Latin, Art—Pictorial, Decorative, or Technical—and Music, and offers three year courses in German, Mathematics and History. Teachers specially qualified by scholarship and experience for each of these lines of work have been secured. Ample equipments in the way of laboratories and libraries are provided, and opportunities equal to the best are offered to all wishing to do high school work.

Entrance to the LaPorte High School may be had upon examination and assignment by the Superintendent, or without examination on presentation of certificate of attendance in other high schools of good standing, upon evidence of satisfactory completion of work from the eighth grades of the City Schools, or on diploma from the Country Schools of Indiana.

Advanced standing and credit will be given for work done in the Township High Schools of LaPorte County on presentation of certified copy of pupil's record on entering the LaPorte High School.

To meet the different tendencies and ambitions of students the six years' work offered has been divided into three lines of four years each, named by the leading subject and entitling those completing any one of these lines to a diploma of Graduation. These courses are the Latin, Scientific and Commercial. The Latin Course admits to Literary or Scientific Courses of the leading Colleges and Universities of the Central States without examination. The Scientific Course admits to the College Scientific without examinations. The Commercial Course gives no College entrance without examinations. Those contemplating this course, however, have recently been admitted on all work done here, conditioned in University of Michigan in Language.

In case students do not wish to take all the prescribed work of any course, a diploma may be earned by successfully completing elective work for not less than thirty credits, the minimum for which diplomas are granted. This diploma does not entitle holder to college entrance without examination.

Each recitation period per week, if work be continued through one-half year, entitles the person successfully completing requirements of same to one-fifth credit.

The subjects prescribed in the various courses will be found in the exhibit of work given below.

Four years are regularly required for completing any regular course and a minimum of thirty-two credits is required for graduation from regular courses. Substitution in subjects in stated courses may be made with the consent of the Principal and Superintendent, but substitutions invalidating the college entrance or State Commission requirements will forfeit right to any but the Thirty Credit or Special Course Diploma.

The daily program and courses are so arranged that pupils so desiring it may with the consent of the Principal and Superintendent do more than the regular amount of work, and thus shorten the time required for graduation, or by wise selection may be able to complete all required work for graduation in more than one course during four years. The privilege of extra work will be forfeited, however, should the regular work fail to be satisfactory.

A credit represents one recitation five times per week for one-half year. Regular work requires 20 recitations of 45 minutes each per week, exclusive of music and general exercises.

The various courses of the schools are made up from work selected from the nine departments.

The English department is the last one organized, and was established as a separate department in 1897, with Miss Katharine Crane as teacher. Miss Crane still holds the literature work, while the composition work is in charge of Miss Karoline Klager.

The course includes the reading of a college requirement list of classics in English and American Literature, together with a grammatical and rhetorical study of these works and a four years' course in English Composition.

It is the intention, as soon as practicable, to add to the work of this department one year's work in the history of literature. This can be done by re-arranging the literature work in grades seven to eleven inclusive, without requiring any additional hours on part of the students.

The Latin department was one of the first established in the schools, and is now in charge of Mr. C. O. Nelson.

The work of the Department calls for the following:

First Year:—General principles of Grammar, laying stress upon conjugation, declension and syntax. About fifty pages of easy Latin are translated.

Second Year:—Translation of four books of Caesar's Gallic War; the study of more complex forms of Latin prose, indirect discourse and the study of Roman warfare.

Third Year:—Translation of six orations of Cicero; study of prose composition; study of Roman life and oratory.

Fourth Year:—Translation of nine books of Virgil's Aeneid; Geography of the Ancient World; essays on subjects suggested by the text; 1,000 to 2,500 lines of Ovid.

The German department is in charge of Miss Karoline Klager, and the course is arranged as follows:

First Year:—Conversational exercises and reading. Latter part of the year, Grammar.

Second Year:—Grammar: Translations from English into German; German into English. Reading easy German; prose and poetry.

Third Year:—Continue Grammar. Write short German compositions and translations. Harris' Prose Composition. Read and discuss German classics: William Tell, The Song of the Bell, Schiller; Mina von Barnhelm, Lessing; Short Poems; Goethe, etc.

Graduates of this department have entered the Junior German Classes in Ann Arbor, by examination.

In the department of Mathematics, in charge of Principal F. L. Sims, the work is as follows:

First Year:—Algebra, through quadratics. Second Year:—Plane Geometry. Third Year:—Solid Geometry; Lines and planes in space; Polyhedrons; Cylinders and Cones; the Sphere. Fourth Year:—Second Semester, Higher Algebra, in charge of Superintendent Wood; Radicals, Quadrates, Ratio, Proportion, Progressions, Imaginary Quantities, Logarithms, Binominal Theorem.

Throughout the course special attention is given to practical applications of the work, much supplementary work and original demonstrations being required.

The Science department is in charge of Mr. C. J. Posey, and is equipped with chemical, physical and biological laboratories. The department offers one year's work in Botany or Zoology on alternate years, one-half year's work each in Physical Geography and Physiology, and a full year's work in Physics and Chemistry. The laboratory equipments are adequate, and throughout the course laboratory note-books are prepared in connection with laboratory practice.

The department of History has not yet been organized as a distinct department. The work is at present distributed so that first year work in General History is conducted by Miss Katharine Crane and Mr. C. O. Nelson. The work in English History, U. S. History and Civil Government is conducted by Principal F. L. Sims, who has charge of the history work.

It is hoped that a special teacher of history may soon be appointed, and that all this work may be put under the care of one person, giving an organic view of the three or four years' work which may be offered under such circumstances.

The course in history needs extension, but steps in that direction are not advisable with the present limited teaching corps.

The Commercial department is fast gaining favor with students and patrons, and is in charge of Mr. H. C. Noe, who also acts as supervisor in the grades. The extension of the work from two to four years has resulted in more than doubling the membership in the department, and has made it equal to the other departments in scholastic worth and training. As now organized the department offers two and one-half years in Book-keeping and Business Practice; one year in Commercial Arithmetic; one year in Commercial Geography, one-half year in Commercial Law and Descriptive Economics and one year in Shorthand and Typewriting. The enrollment this year in the Typewriting class is forty-eight, and the prospects are for a greater attendance if a sufficient number of machines can be provided.

The Art department for the past twelve years has been in charge of Mr. F. H. Simons, who also acts as supervisor in the grades. He has done much to cultivate an appreciation of Art and to develop artistic ability in this community.

The High School Art Course offers four years of consecutive work in each of the lines offered, namely, Pictorial, Decorative and Constructive. Both Decorative and Constructive work requires as a basis a familiarity with the principles of pictorial, perspective, light and shade and water color work. And so those desiring to enter technical classes are strongly advised to elect the pictorial with the decorative or constructive work. Several students and post-graduates take the four years' work in the three lines.

The department of Music is in charge of Miss Helen Poole, also supervisor in the grades. Each class has class instruction on the theory of Music and vocal exercises one period each week. In the class room the course furnishes work throughout the four years as follows:

First and Second Years:—Elements of Music, Solféggios, Sight Reading, Two-part Harmony, Rounds, Theory of Scales, Vowel Practice and Formation of Tone, Chorus Practice.

Third and Fourth Years:—Transpositions, Modulations, Elements of Harmony, Intervals, General History of Music. Chorus Practice.

The department of Physical Culture is in charge of Miss Nina B. Lamkin, whose services have been retained by the High School Athletic Association. The gymnasium has been established in the old Third Ward School Building. It was remodeled by the Board of Education; the apparatus has been furnished by the Athletic Association. Each class receives instruction two periods per week under the direction of the instructor, with privileges of the gymnasium at all unoccupied periods during the week. The expenses of the department have been paid by membership fees and proceeds from athletic entertainments given during the past two years.

In all the departments there has been an earnest endeavor on part of pupils and teachers to do honest work and to make the interest of each department subordinate to the interests and general welfare of the entire school. The best work in the departments can only be done when there is most perfect harmony and co-operation on the part of those responsible for the various lines of work.

The maintenance of these departments and the liberal patronage of them reflects great credit on the community, and speaks much for the educational sentiment of LaPorte.

The History of the Class of 1903

THIS with considerable trepidation that the historian enters upon the arduous task of chronicling the epoch-making events in the career of the Class of '03. The incidents in which it participated, the mooted questions it revived, the causes it championed, and the battles it waged are all too fresh in the memory of the present generation for the historian's account to be accredited as either impartial or authentic, adhere it ever so closely to the truth. Realizing that several cycles of high school students must have passed through the beloved halls of our building, before the events here recorded will be viewed dispassionately and with a due respect for the corroborative evidence of numerous historical citations, the chronicler has sought to verify, even at great expense of time and labor, the following account of 1903's meteoric career. Survivors of the various escapades, eye-witnesses of important events, and veterans of the battles have been interviewed at length, archives have been searched and original records diligently compared, in the hope that each statement might be authenticated beyond the questioning of the most skeptical.

The Class of 1903 entered the high school in the fall of 1899¹ by invitation from above and not because of pressure from below,² and displayed unusual adaptability in quickly adjusting itself to the new environment.³ It immediately revived the lost art of bluffing successfully and flunking gracefully,⁴ and soon acquired the other valuable lessons of experience wrought out at such cost of labor and trouble by the advanced classes.⁵

Being a combination of the two eighth grades and the eighth-and-a-half grade, there was ample opportunity for variety of opinion in the state affairs of the class, and the class meetings were characterized by frenzied oratory and heavy balloting with occasional bolting minorities.⁶

A membership of seventy-six combined with a willingness to reciprocate any belligerent attitude toward the class, sufficed to prevent most of the impositions generally practiced upon the credulity of freshmen, and the first year of their high school life passed pleasantly and profitably.⁷

The resolution of the class to stand firm at the post of duty was well exemplified during their first year. Their monitors, after rising to report the absences, remained standing like the Roman guard at the gate of Pompeii, unmoved by the tumult and confusion about them. The Principal finally came to their relief and permitted them to be seated.⁸ On the day appointed for the Freshmen to entertain the school by instrumental solos, recitations and readings, there was more hilarity, laughter and exuberant joy than on any previous similar day, and the class felt highly honored and gratified at the appreciation of their efforts.⁹

During the Sophomore year much of the time was devoted to the cultivation of the social side of school life,¹⁰ and to careful study of the strategy of class scraps and flag fights.¹¹ Internal dissensions concerning class colors, contested elections, and an acrimonious and interminable debate on "Resolved that Freshmen are more to be Pitted than Blamed," occupied much of the spare time of the class this year.¹²

During the Junior year the class came into great prominence.¹³ A vacillating and timid Senior class made the bold determination of the Juniors all the more noticeable.¹⁴ They immediately assumed the heavy responsibility of directing the affairs of the school.¹⁵ The choice of class colors was finally made without violence or disturbance.¹⁶ A class flag was manufactured and constantly worn as a corset by one or the other of the boys of the class in order that it might be instantly available in any emergency.¹⁷ Manifestations of activity on the part of the ordinarily inane preceding class, gave rise to suspicions which were verified by the appearance of the Senior flag on the building. The conflict thus precipitated was sharp but brief. The Senior flag came down, the Maroon and Silver went up in its stead.¹⁸

The '02 flag is now preserved in the High School Museum of War Relics.¹⁹ Casualties on both sides were heavy.²⁰ A reception was now tendered the repentant enemy, which was the most elaborate affair ever undertaken by any class in the history of the school.²¹ The final humiliation of the preceding class was administered on the night of commencement when they were compelled to graduate under an '03 flag.²² This coup d'état greatly agitated the School Board.²³

The present closing year of the history of this remarkable class is so crowded with incident that mere mention of the more important events must suffice.²⁴ Social affairs have not been neglected,²⁵ extra courses have been carried by the majority of the class, internal insurrections have not been frequent and peace and prosperity has smiled on 1903.²⁶ Her representatives have held the highest offices of power, honor and responsibility in the school,²⁷ they have successfully managed the football and baseball teams, assured the success of the Glee Club, Orchestra and Mandolin Club, and so directed its affairs that the deficit of the Gymnasium Fund is now replaced by a large surplus.²⁸ Realizing that because of their superior prowess and numbers that to offer to scrap with the succeeding classes would merely mean the extermination and annihilation of promising candidates for the rank of Senior, the class has refrained from in any way inciting hostilities with its successors.²⁹

The culminating event, the fitting climax to the career of the Class of 1903 consisted in the publication of that epoch-making volume, "The Maple."³⁰ In so doing they established a precedent which few may dare to follow, and achieved a fame which will shimmer and shine down through the ages.³¹

Chronicles of the Tribe of '04

CHAPTER I

1. The Tribe of '04 Entereth into the Land of the Highschoolites. 2. They Abideth Them There. 3. They Choose Their Leaders.

OW it came to pass that in the ninth month and on the fifth day of the same, in the sixth year after the building of the new Temple, there had assembled in their Sanhedrin, the tribes of the High-schoolites.

And it came to pass that they did lament with great lamentations the loss of much of their people by reason of the plague of "Exs." which had been sent upon them.

And moreover, they did lament the loss of many of their patriarchs and wise men who had gathered up their scrolls of sheepskin, donned fine linen, and, speaking words of wisdom and eloquence, had departed them hence into the land of the Alumni.

And moreover, while they were in lamentation and great sorrow, there arose without a fearsome noise, and there did enter into the Temple, even into the innermost parts thereof, a great host, yea, even a multitude, the like of which had never before been seen in all the land about.

And great was the consternation of the Highschoolites, and great was the fear upon them.

But perceiving that the newcomers were of goodly appearance and comely, and fair to look upon, they took courage and lifted up their voices and spake, saying, "Whence comest thou, O strangers, thus to invade our Temple? Come thou up and make obeisance unto us if thou wouldst expect our mercy."

But the newcomers smiled a smile the width of which was one cubit, and lifting up their voices, spake: "Hear, O ye tribes of the High-schoolites. We come from the land of the Eighth Graders, and behold, there has been allotted unto us a place in this Temple. And moreover, it has been said unto us, 'Go ye in and possess the place.' Peace be with you."

Whereupon they did gather up their scrolls and tablets and set them down, fearing no man.

Thereupon began they asking much questions of the ruler of the Temple, and pursuing the ways of learning.

And it came shortly to pass that it was spake unto the newcomers, whose name was Naughty, surnamed Fours, "Verily, it will be well for thee to choose from among thy goodly number certain of thy tribe, that they may be the rulers and the high priests of thy tribe, and hob-nob with the boss of the Sanhedrin, and scheme schemes and lead in the councils of the Naughty Fours."

Meantime the Naughty Fours (which, being translated, means '04's) said among themselves, "Whom shall we choose?"

There was one among them who was fair spoken and well versed in the manners and customs of the parliamentarians, and he was good in command. And they lifted up their voices and said, "Behold, him will we make our Chief Ruler" (which in the English tongue is called President). And ballots did they cast in great numbers, and it was done as the prophet had foretold.

And likewise did they choose others from out their tribe that they might hold office and become puffed up. And the thing pleased them, and they rejoiced and waxed wise and studious. And it was so.

And here endeth the first chapter.

CHAPTER II

1. A Strange Tribe Entereth the Land. 2. The 'o4's Smite the Tribes of the Highschoolites.

Now it came to pass that in the ninth month of the first year after the tribe of 'o4 had taken up its abode in the land of the Highschoolites, that there appeared on the borders of the land, even at the gates of the Temple, a strange and unsightly people who spake with a foreign accent.

And thus spake the motley horde: "Open up thy gates, O ye Highschoolites, and let us to come in, for we famish for knowledge. Verily have we drained the fountains of learning in the lower country, and devoured all of the manna of that land, and we perish lest thy gates be opened unto us."

Then were the gates opened and the newcomers rushed in; yea, like waves of the sea came they in. And they filled the Temple to bursting, and all of the corners, and the passageways, and the doors, and the outer courts and the inner courts.

And nowhere could the Highschoolites turn, save before them stood some of these men, named Fresh, and thereafter known as Freshmen. And in the greatness of their numbers did they become an abomination, yea, even a great nuisance.

Then came it to pass about this time that the tribe which dwelt upon the left hand of the great o4's became "funny," which terrible state is also known as "gay."

Whereupon the 'o4's did rise them up and smite the tribe on their left, hip and thigh. And full sore and mournful and woe-begone was this tribe when the carnage had ceased. And they withdrew to the far eastern portion of the land, to dwell there in painful recollection and fear of the tribe of 'o4.

And here endeth the second chapter.

CHAPTER III

1. The Tribe of 'o4 Becomes Greatest in the Land. 2. Their Prophets Prophecy.

And now, when had come the third year of their sojourn in the land of the Highschoolites, did the Tribe of 'o4 wax strong and mighty.

For when were chosen leaders of the bands who did execute strange and divers maneuvers in the Place of the Cracked Bones, called Gym., then were the mighty men of the Tribe of 'o4 chosen.

And when maidens were chosen to make a joyful sound before the assembled tribes, and to sing and lead in the rejoicing when the enemy went down humbled to the dust, then were the maidens of the Tribe of 'o4 selected.

And likewise, when were called together the musicians from the tribes to sound forth the trumpet and the cymbal, were the leaders chosen from the Tribe of 'o4.

So also, when the tribes stand forth to contend one with another for honors and for fame, do the men of the tribe of 'o4 excel. Verily, excel they all others.

And their maidens sing songs, and their old men dream dreams, and their prophets prophesy, and the tribe grows wise and famous, as the prophet had foretold. And it was so. Selah!

And here endeth the first scroll.

Sophomore Class History

A Narrative of the Engagements of Company F, First Volunteers, in the Crusade into the Land of Higher Learning

UMORS of a projected invasion into the hitherto unexplored Land of Higher Learning having reached us early in the year of 1901, about sixty of us decided to join the expedition which was to partake of the nature of both conquest and crusade. The prospects of lively skirmishes, exciting adventures, and untold treasures, appealed strongly to our military natures, while the opportunities to distinguish ourselves by feats of daring and heroism, thus achieving lasting military fame, made us anxious to march at once.

So about the first of September we underwent the customary examinations, and when those who were unfit for the rigors of the march were winnowed from the ranks, we were mustered into Company F, First Volunteers L. H. S., and assigned quarters in the barracks just west of Company S.

Resplendent in our new uniforms and shining accoutrements we imagined ourselves fit to make glad the heart of any general. But our discomfiture was complete when we were ordered out for inspection and battalion drill. Interpreting the command each from his point of view, there was some slight confusion in obeying the orders. However, after a few hours the officers managed to distangle the chaotic mass of private, knapsack, canteen, corporal, haversack and sergeant, and we presented a very respectable appearance when the reviewing officers arrived.

We pass by in silence the remarks made by our more experienced companions in arms and shall endeavor to let fade any memory we may have of their smirks and side glances at our martial array as we saluted the Commander-in Chief.

Soon came the welcome order to march, and we prepared for battle, for we well knew how fraught with danger was any attempt to invade this wonderful country, whose hills and forests we before had viewed only from a distance. Hardly had we crossed the boundary line, until several of our company became lost in a jungle of cloak-rooms and were rescued at great peril. One poor companion, whose memory we cherish for his intrepid courage, essayed to penetrate the gloomy fastnesses of the Attic, a prominent elevation of this strange land, and was seen no more. It is thought that he became caught in a net of electric bell wires and was electrocuted.

Our expedition was but fairly started when we found our way blocked by Collar and Daniels' Hill, a strongly fortified position, whose garrison was commanded by a distant relative of the great Lord Nelson. This siege we remember as one of the most terrible of our experiences. For nine long months we invested the hill hoping to tire the enemy out, but without avail. Our scouting parties were captured, mines were countermined and assaults repulsed with great loss to us, strategic maneuvers checkmated with surprising military genius, and several determined attacks repulsed with volleys of declensions, conjugations, translations and constructions too terrifying for any line to endure. Thus we were compelled to fall back to our original position. At the close of our first year's campaign, however, the enemy gave signs of weakening and we made a bayonet charge up the hill, only to find that he had skillfully withdrawn to a still more strongly fortified position—Mt. Caesar.

With an overworked Red Cross Ambulance Corps, and considerably diminished numbers we swept on, winning victories at Craneville and Warren's Creek with the loss of a few of our less alert members. Major-General Isaac Newton, Commander-in-Chief of the vanquished host, after the defeat at Algebra Bridge, resigned his commission and fled the country. Then followed a cessation of hostilities and a truce of three months was established. But alas, during this interval, while we were growing unaccustomed to the use of arms, two of the opposing generals spent the summer in Europe, studying advanced military tactics, and upon the resumption of hostilities in September we were met with such completely organized plan of resistance, carried out with such military genius, that the success of our campaign was doubtful.

The successor to General Isaac Newton proved to be an old campaigner and an expert strategist, whose heavy Geometry Artillery, which was surprisingly mobile, made the most unexpected charges and swooped down upon our unprotected out-posts always with terrible effect. We are learning his tactics however, and have recently captured several of his heaviest Theorem guns and we are now using them with good effect. If we can withstand the disastrous effects of a new explosive shell called the "Original Exercise," we may soon hope for a great victory on Geometry Plain. The siege of Mt. Caesar is progressing slowly but surely to a successful issue, but the flower of the enemy's forces, the great General Po Ze is reported as routing our forces completely at Physiology Swamp. A late dispatch conveys the glad intelligence that the German and English tactics employed by two of the opposing generals are not proving successful in withstanding our determined assaults and we are hourly expecting confirmation of the rumor that these generals have surrendered. The division of our troops which crossed Commercial Bridge is reported as making great inroads in the enemy's territory.

The few weeks remaining before the excessively hot weather begins will be crucial ones in the campaign, but the outlook is encouraging and we hope soon to come marching home with great treasures from the temples of the Land of Higher Learning.

A Translation of a Chronographic Inscription in Sesquipedalia Verba

THE resumption of school activities in the autumn of 1902 marked the launching of the Class of 1906 on its career. Its two distinguishing characteristics, volubility and multitudinous membership, made it immediately conspicuous. The aggregate membership of approximately seventy, compensated partially for the diminutive size of the individual members of the class, while the originality and fecundity of the ideas concocted by their versatile genius forced the reluctant admission from the advanced classes that 1906 was to be assigned to an elevated position peculiarly its own. Comparisons instituted in envy, ended in chagrin, and became so odious that after flourishing for a brief interval, they ceased abruptly and permanently.

The customary impositions upon the credulity of the uninitiated and unsophisticated Freshman were, in our case, entirely dispensed with, for our perspicacity and penetrating intuition detected the futile machinations intended to beguile us into embarrassing situations as our more gullible predecessors repeatedly had been. The lack of originality in their puerile devices calculated to deceive us, created in us a supreme contempt for their pretended sagacity, consequently we have ignored their petty efforts to overawe us by pompous pretensions of intellectual superiority.

With the teachers we gained instant recognition. The originality of our views on matters of Ancient History, and their divergence from the traditionally accepted facts and opinions, caused wide-spread comment, while our discovery of hitherto unsuspected relations and abbreviated methods in our mathematical studies, were worthy of the laudatory comment they received. Recognizing the ultra-conservative tendencies and disposition of one trained in old methods, we were considerate in imposing our more concise yet somewhat theoretical system of algebraic solutions upon the mathematician with his ante-diluvian methods who dealt with the subject for our amusement, and have concluded philosophically to await vindication by posterity as to the celerity and accuracy of our transcendental methods.

Our cogency of expression, combined with our enviable fluency and versatility of style, has been the wonder and admiration of those who have been fortunate enough to have the pleasure of reading our productions. Our researches in English Literature, which have resulted in the propagation of many critical opinions not generally found in ordinary textbooks, are so highly appreciated that upon earnest solicitation, several of us will repeat the same work next year.

But it is not of the varied phases of our natural gifts, which have been acquired through little or no effort on our part, that we would thus modestly speak. Our claim to merited distinction from the less talented preceding classes, rests on the unquestioned superiority, the ebullient volubility, the sparkling effervescence, the lofty plane, the uninterrupted flow, the philosophical meanderings, the iconoclastic criticism, the felicitious diction, the constructive suggestion, the careful modulation, the varied tone, the piquant repartee, the originality of idea, the changing view point, the extended scope, the breadth of view, the long-sustained incessant, never-ending, perpetual quality of our conversation. In this feature of our educational progress we have no superiors, and few equals in the land.

Happy in the recognition of our unchallenged standing in the school, we have not been compelled to participate in the strenuous struggle for recognition or prominence, and consequently our career has been uninterrupted by any extended succession of noteworthy events. We have condescended to participate in the various enterprises of the school and lend our necessary assistance to furthering their success. Our musical talent, our elocutionary ability, our gymnastic skill, our athletic accomplishments, our unrivalled feminine pulchritude and grace have contributed to the gaiety of nations and the edification of the school, and we await the broader opportunities of the future, after the less fortunate classes who precede us by a few years shall have departed, when we will turn our attention from the cultivation of the Art of Conversation to the varied interests of the school, to establish precedents, to institute innovations and to mark a new epoch in the history of the High School.

The High School Gymnasium

The idea of a gymnasium in connection with the high school was suggested in the latter part of the school year of 1900, and ways and means of establishing and maintaining a well equipped department of physical culture were discussed during the year. When the school work was resumed in the fall of 1900 the interest in the gymnasium project had not abated during the summer vacation, but had greatly increased.

The main difficulty was the lack of a suitable room, but it was then suggested that the old ward school, a two-story brick building, which had been closed for several years, would make a very good gymnasium, on account of its proximity to the high school. The consent of the Board of Education was obtained for the use of this building by means of a petition drawn up and signed by the pupils of the high school.

When the building was obtained it was only necessary to organize, and this was done, the following officers being elected by the membership: Mr. Walter Frederickson, President; Mr. Frank Decker, Treasurer; Miss Ethel Haggard, Secretary; and the organization was named "The LaPorte High School Athletic Association." Much credit is due to Mr. Walter Frederickson and Mr. Walter Fox as the prominent organizers of the Association which soon numbered about one hundred in its membership. The first apparatus was donated by the members of the Association. At first there was no regular instruction, the gymnasium being used more for recreation than for regular physical exercises.

After school had reopened in the fall of 1901, the High School Athletic Association was again re-organized. Mr. Charles McClung was chosen President; Mr. Frank Decker, Treasurer, and Miss Ethel Haggard, Secretary. Several improvements were made in the building, the partition in the hall of the upper story being removed, thus increasing the size of the room, a new floor put in, the insides of both rooms repainted, and electric lighting installed. The membership was also increased, and a very competent instructor, Miss Nina B. Lamkin, was secured to take charge of the year's work, which was divided into three terms of ten weeks each.

Various classes were organized and under the excellent instruction of Miss Lamkin, they became so proficient that it was decided to give a public exhibition and entertainment at the end of the first term. This entertainment was given on December 13, 1901, and was very successful, as was also the second one given May 29, 1902. The reputation and permanency of the gymnasium was now established. The proceeds derived from these two entertainments and the membership fees were expended in purchasing more apparatus and in paying for the instruction. When the school year closed the gymnasium was an established success and stood as a testimonial to the labors of its organizers and promoters.

At the beginning of the school year, September, 1902, the Athletic Association elected Mr. Cornelius Rumely, President; Mr. Harry Kramer, Secretary, and Prof. F. L. Sims, Treasurer; and in addition an Athletic Council, consisting of Messrs. Cornelius Rumely, George Bosserman, Charles Stanton and Homer Boyd, was chosen by the various classes. The services of Miss Lamkin were again engaged and work was immediately begun. The physical culture exercises and drills were adjusted to the needs of the various classes with most beneficial results in improved carriage, muscular development and generally improved health.

The fall term's work consisted of various calisthenic drills and heavy apparatus work, and the exhibition given on December 19, 1902, at Hall's Opera House, proved a decided success. The winter term has been devoted to the regular work and to basket ball, while the spring term will be spent in advanced work.

The Board of Education very generously provides the heated and lighted building, and the willingness and success of the school in assuming and providing for the annual expense of about $350.00 assures the permanency of the gymnasium as a department of the high school, and expresses in no uncertain terms the school's appreciation of its value.

YE GYM.

The Athletic Association Entertainments

THE regular class work in our newly organized and equipped gymnasium culminated in a public exhibition December 13, 1901. Miss Nina B. Lamkin had been in charge of the work during the fall quarter, and in the short period of ten weeks was able to so thoroughly drill the various divisions that we were well prepared to make a public appearance. The regular calisthenic drills, as well as the more spectacular and fancy gymnastic work, were wholly new to us, but the interest and enthusiasm, and the appreciation of the value of the exercises, made it possible for us to present a pleasing entertainment in this short time.

Nearly a hundred pupils took part in the program, which was well received by the large audience. The accuracy of the drills as well as their novelty made them appreciated, and the costumes added to the charm of rhythmic movements and lively music in unison.

The second semi-annual entertainment was given May 29, 1902, in Hall's Opera House. The participants were better prepared for this occasion, and the program in general was an improvement on the previous one. That it was appreciated was proved by the generous applause that followed each number.

The first year's programs were financially successful, and the Association was thus enabled to pay for the instruction and purchase new apparatus for the gymnasium.

The third entertainment was given in the Opera House, Friday, December 19, 1902, and excelled the performances of the previous year. The training and experience already acquired made it possible to give an almost new and much varied program, which proved as pleasing as its predecessors. The final program of this year will be given May 15th, in the Opera House, and is expected to prove as successful as the others.

The Junior Reception

The annual Junior reception given by the Class of '03 to the Class of '02 was in every way an innovation. All previous receptions had been held outside the city, but the Class of '03 instituted a precedent by holding their reception at the High School building.

The High School building in its transformation was more beautiful than one imagined it could be. Erected for the occasion at the front of the Assembly room was a large, handsomely set stage on which the plays were presented. On the second floor, the English room decorated in their class colors, blue and white, served as the Senior reception room, and the Latin room decorated in their class colors, maroon and silver, served as the Junior apartment. From both of these rooms all desks and benches had been removed and means of amusement were furnished for those who did not participate in the dancing. The hall down stairs was a place of light and beauty. Everywhere were graceful ferns and beautiful flowers and the lofty arches were artistically draped with festoons of twined myrtle. The landings were especially beautiful with their cozy corners hid among the ferns and flowers. From the hall opened the Art room in which refreshments were served. Just inside these double doors was a pyramid of flowers, flanked on either side by a small table which was decked with the colors of the respective class.

When the guests were seated in the Assembly room and the overture had been played by the Cordills, the curtain rose on "The Smith Mystery," a charming little one act comedy. In a certain family there were three Miss Smiths, a young aunt, her niece and the maid, each of whom had a lover whose initials were T. S. The entanglements that arose in consequence were amusingly presented by three of the most talented Junior girls. After a short interlude, this was followed by "The Boston Dip," a comedietta in one act, also presented by the members of the Junior class. In this were depicted the struggles of a poor family, the Mulligrubs, who suddenly became rich and desired to move in swell society and ape the manners of the "Four Hundred." The daughters succeeded well enough, but the uneducated father and mother encountered too many difficulties to overcome, the climax of which was reached when Mrs. Mulligrub attempts to learn to do "that Dipper thing," (a new waltz) and Mr. Mulligrub thinks she is flirting with M. Adonis, the French dancing master. However, everything is explained and all ends as happily as did the Junior reception.

CAPTURED 11:53 P. M., JUNE 5, 1902
NOW PRESERVED IN HIGH SCHOOL MUSEUM OF WAR RELICS

When the play was over the guests and hosts repaired to the lower hall where Terpsichore held sway. After a program of ten or twelve numbers, came the Cotillion led by Miss Nina B. Lamkin and Mr. J. W. Rumely. At about twelve o'clock light refreshments were served in the Art room, Miss Klager and Mrs. Mayhew presiding at one table and Mrs. F. T. Rench and the Junior president at the other, aided by their corps of waiters, most of whom were Sophomore girls. Following the refreshments came the closing dance program, and as an appropriate finale the Seniors gave their yell and departed, voting that this reception was the most successful as well as the most unique that had ever been held in LaPorte. There was present one guest of honor, Wm. P. Rogers, Dean of the Law School of Indiana University. The members of the School Board did not respond to their invitations. Much credit for the success of the Junior reception is due to Miss Nina B. Lamkin and Prof. I. N. Warren.

LaPorte (which in French means "door," a name due to the opening in the forest southwest of town, still marked by Door Village) does not lay claim to very great antiquity. The LaPorteans retained their ancient customs longer than was usual among the cities of Indiana and have ever been noted for the vigor of their reasoning powers; even at the present day their superiority over their neighboring towns is apparent in many ways. The city is situated on high ground, overhung by †Bald Hill on the southeast and on the north by the Summit, 500 feet above Lake Michigan, from which a semi-panoramic view may be obtained of the lake and its surrounding country.

To obtain even a hasty glimpse of the sights of LaPorte, a stay of at least 14 to 16 days is necessary. The visitor who has but a fortnight at his disposal will be assisted to make the best use of his time by the following plan. A free use of cabs will also be necessary.

†The visitor is referred to the account of the battle of Bald Hill, published in Youth's Companion by Harry Lay.

The coupes are not in keeping with the station (on account of being recently remodeled). However cabs dating back to the 19th century are on exhibition one block south of the station. The enterprising character of the LaPorteans sufficiently accounts for the almost entire disappearance of all relics of the past and for its thoroughly modern aspect.

(I) Court House, (admission gratis). This is an enormous sandstone structure and the great focus of business. The tower (150 feet high) commands a magnificent view; North are the great lakes and the wilderness of Canada which stretches upward to the North Pole, to the left are the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean, the latter being hid from view by the former. To the right are the Adirondacks and the Atlantic, while to the south are Kentucky, Tennessee and the Gulf of Mexico. The air is generally not sufficiently clear to observe all these localities, but when they are visible it is safe to say that such a view is absolutely unique.

The car leaves the Court House every two hours for the suburbs. A short ride will be found interesting and also beneficial to obtain a hasty glimpse of the country. As the car starts, to the left may be seen the (II) Elk Club rooms and as the car advances to the right another view of the Court House may be obtained. Again to the left one block south, the place now marked by an agricultural house was the former site, in the 19th century, of the Standard Hotel. This hotel has accommodated such men as Henry Ward Beecher and Daniel Webster. A block to the west rises the famous (III) City Hall in the late Gothic style. This building is of special interest to the tourist, because of the excitement which reigned over the country due to the mysterious disappearance of the '02 flag which for a few seconds waved triumphantly from its flag staff.

Passing on through the manufacturing district and crossing the railroad the tourist is brought into a district where the architecture derives romantic effects from the broad sweeping features of the surrounding country. A little farther on may be seen to the right of the car, the hospital, erected in ancient times by Dr. Collins whose opium cure is renowned the world over. This was later used as a Keely institute and recently served as the residence of a millionaire. Passing on through (IV) Fair View (guide books 25 cents) the chief attraction of which is the school for boys, we approach the Chautauqua. These grounds are unquestionably the chief attraction of LaPorte, being at all times in summer months the scene of great festivities. Near the entrance on the left side is the Palatial Hotel, with terraced grounds and large portico and to the left of the vestibule is the renowned dining room done in antique frescoes after Michael Angelo. On the right side of the park is the Pallais de Fetes for concerts. Dotted here and there on elevated terraces are summer homes. Another relic of the past is the gate-way originally designed by "Reubens" and adorned with "barb-wire." Many additions have been made in the style of the original.

(V) The Library (recently restored) is especially admired for its chaste simplicity. Michael Angelo is said to have studied the proportions of this building, taking special interest in the staircase, which artistically crosses the front windows, before the construction of his master pieces. This can easily be realized.

The most interesting edifice is the (VI) Museum (admission gratis). The building originally designed for a school house and now used for a Museum is just north of the famous Gymnasium. You will be first attracted by the east wing of the building where for many years has thrived a famous colony of artists (admission courteously granted). In each room are courteous guides who almost force their services upon you, leading you through the intricacies of Roman history, chemical analysis, Latin idioms, etc. The main room on the second floor is the lecture room, where eloquence on all branches of misconduct is distributed daily and at all hours. To the west of the main room is the depository of Tam O'Shanter. The figures in the lecture room are arranged according to the Darwinian theory of evolution, the lowest type being found on the west. The art of depicting frivolity and vanity in the countenances of the figures on the west has been only fairly successful. Some of the heads on the east however have been admirably finished. Passing from the Museum toward the city, the tourist crosses the historic "Place des Fetes," where many strenuous battles by the "Knights of the Shin Guard" have been fought.

The monumental pile just across the "Place des Fetes" is an incubator and store house for the Museum.

A Senior's Soliloquy on the Foregone Scrap

To scrap, or not to scrap, that is the question:
 Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
 The slings, the taunts, the jibes of stalwart Juniors;
 Or take up clubs against a mass of matter,
 And with the butt-ends, pound it. To butt, to pound,
 And by these strokes to crack the shins of Juniors,
 'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished. To pound!
 To butt! perchance to fail; ay, there's the rub;
 Yes, sir! perhaps their ropes will bind our limbs,
 And in that mass of knots what pains may come,
 When they have pulled and drawn them up so tight,
 Must give us pause, and make us ask ourselves,
 "Where are we at?" This makes us hesitate;
 For who could bear the jibes of silly Freshies,
 Or face the scornful frowns of daft Sophomores,
 Or flunk in class next morning — that's a joke —
 Or meet the gaze of females who would see
 Our ignominy? Who would scrap-marks bear,
 To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
 But that these taunts of brawny under-classes
 Puzzle the will, and make us rather bear
 The jibes of burly Juniors, than to risk our precious skins?
 Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
 And thus the native hue of resolution
 Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
 And enterprises of hoisting the forbidden flag,
 With this regard their currents turn awry,
 And loose the name of action. Soft you, now!
 We'll make the plea to institute reform,
 And say 'twas for the Maple's sake,
 And make pretense of barbarous actions done
 By far more braver classes that preceded us!
 Now see us swell! why, we can't button up
 Our coat, or pull our hat clear down; for we Have so deceived the faculty. Ahem!

The Ten Commandments

- I. Thou shalt not "Duck Out."
- II. Thou shalt not covet thy brother's place in the line when thou marchest out after thy hat.
- III. Thou shalt not cast thine eyes upon the ceiling, for verily I say unto you the sight thereof is unholy.
- IV. Thou shalt not kick the water pipes for verily the Superintendent doth lurk and sigh for thy downfall.
- V. Thou shalt not hold conversation with thy neighbor without permission.
- VI. Thou shalt not bear false witness when, being sent, thou goest up to the High Priest (Prin.) for he will trip thee in thy prevarications and will surely cast thee out from among the congregation.
- VII. Five days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the sixth is a holiday. On that day thou shalt help thy favorite Prof. and get a stand-in.
- VIII. Thou shalt not take the name of thy Prof. in vain, for his wrath shall wax great and he shall fire thee from the class.
- IX. Honor thy Superintendent and jolly up the faculty that thy credits may be many on the day of thy graduation.
- X. Thou shalt not covet the good will of thy teachers unless thou takest thy books home in the evening (especially thy Chemistry), for verily the all-searching eyes of the teacher thereof will behold thee, and if thou art shortcoming he will flunk thee in the hour of need when thy report card is forthcoming.

There was a fierce youth named Don Barnum,
 Who said of his lessons "O, darn 'em!"
 Whereat the Prof. stormed
 And so Don reformed,
 And now he says only "Consarn 'em."

There was a Professor named Sims,
 Who was subject to horrible whims,
 He was sure to get mad
 If the boys acted bad,
 Then he'd very nearly fracture their limbs.

Sayings Which Have Passed into History

ALLEN FOGLE (in the gymnasium): "Look at those upright horizontal bars."

MR. SIMS: "Reduce the capacity of the tank until it holds twice as much."

MISS POOLE (in 10th grade music): "I want this stopping talked."

MISS CRANE: "Dante tells us how many cubic feet high Satan is."

KATHERINE TEUSCHER (at a basket ball game): "Refugee! refugee! that was a foul."

JUNIOR (who is studying Milton): "After Milton went blind, he always retired early because he could not see very well in the dark."

MR. SHAW (trying to read his shorthand notes): "I don't know whether this is upside down or not."

MR. SIMS: "Were you absent last Monday?"

MISS BEMENT: "No, sir. Didn't I put a spindle on the slip?"

WEBSTER: "Say, Hewson, Shepherd is that fellow who is always jingling dollar bills in the history class."

MISS MEINKE: "The name of our drill is the Spanish Cascaret (Castanet) Dance, isn't it?"

Over there's a young thing they call "Switz,"
Who far from the girls meekly sits;
And they say that one day
A fair maid glanced his way,
And caused him to throw thirty fits.

There was a young man surnamed Copp,
Who wore his thick hair like a mop;
But a calf, one sad day,
Took the hair to be hay,
And Freddie's quite bald now on top.

Forty-five Minutes in the Chemistry Class

SCENE: Biology room. TIME: 9:45 A. M.

(Class has two minutes rough house before Mr. Posey arrives.)

Mr. Posey (calling the roll): "Mr. Webster!"

Mr. Webster is asleep and does not answer.

Mr. Posey (shrieking): "Mr. Webster!"

Mr. Webster (awakening): "I think it is 3HOG."

Mr. Posey: "Very good, but we will come to that later, I am calling the roll now."

Mr. Posey: "What is the chemical combination of aromatic praseodymium and carboliferated molybdenum? Whoknows? Mr. Osborn?"

Mr. Osborn: "I don't believe I can—that is, I am uncertain just—that is—er"

Mr. Posey: "Ha—wat?"

Mr. Osborn: "I don't know."

Mr. Posey (calling on Gardiner): "If a man drinks a quart of commercial 90 per cent alcohol and a pint of hydrogen peroxide, what chemical reaction would result?"

Mr. Gardiner: "Locomotor ataxia of the department of the interior."

Mr. Posey: "Miss Garwood, what is the most common compound of carbon?"

Carrie: "Carbolic acid."

"Betts" Rumely (asking Mr. Posey a question): "If the city council wishes to compel a man to replace a wooden sidewalk with one of CaCO_3 , what reaction would be taken in court?"

Mr. Posey: "I am not supposed to know that, I came from the cornfield; bring that up in the civics class. What is the action of ice water on brass?"

Bell rings, class rushes out singing, "Please go way and let us sleep, don't disturb our slumbers deep."

Miss Schultz remains behind for a moment (to get a note book).

Ten Minutes in the "Amen Corner."

3:30 — 3:30¹/₄—Clark tickles Alexander's ribs.

3:30¹/₄—3:30¹/₂—Alexander jumps two feet.

3:30¹/₂—3:31 —Oglesbee raises seat; Alexander sits on floor.

3:31 — 3:31¹/₄—J. S. Martin grins out loud; Link yawns cavernously.

3:31¹/₄—3:31¹/₂—Walton knocks Weaver's books on the floor; rough house.

3:31¹/₂—3:32 —Visitor comes in.

3:32 — 3:32¹/₂—All turn to rubber.

3:32¹/₂—3:33 —Boklund sits on chewing gum.

3:33 — 3:33¹/₂—Boklund looks bored; VandeWalker looks innocent.

3:33¹/₂—3:34 —Everybody says "Ah—h—h!" Gum still there.

3:34 — 3:34¹/₂—Hoover looks round and grins; gum still there.

3:34¹/₂—3:35 —Clark sits on a pin.

3:35 — 3:35¹/₂—Clark acts in an agitated manner.

3:35¹/₂—3:36 —Corner gets "called down."

3:36 — 3:36¹/₂—Everybody studies.

3:36¹/₂—3:37 —Link fills an ink-well to overflowing; chorus of "Ahs!"

3:37 — 3:37¹/₂—Fox giggles spasmodically.

3:37¹/₂—3:38 —Chase tries to sneeze; great suspense.

3:38 — 3:38¹/₂—G. Martin squeaks; Everybody rubbers at him.

3:38¹/₂—3:39 —Martin gets red in the face; Harrison disappears under his seat.

3:39 — 3:39¹/₂—Droberg shoots paper wad; hits Louie Wilhelm.

3:39¹/₂—3:40 —Rough house between Hoover and Ashley; no harm done.

The Ominous Presence appears at the door; silence and diligent study ensue for two minutes.

The Fire at the Gym.

Fire! fire! fire! over at the Gym.
Professor Sims had heard the cry
And then "'twas up to him."
So quickly gathering boys and pails
Across the street he flew
The people stopped and looked at him
All wondered what he'd do.
A boy was then for water sent,
He quite forgot the pump,
But went way over to the school
Like any fireman chump;
The doors were locked, so back he came,
And never cracked a smile,
But said, that after so much work,
He guessed he'd rest awhile.
Meanwhile the High School girls pitched in
And my! how hard they worked.
They carried water up the stairs
Nor was there one that shirked.
The crowd had now increased in size;
Smoke from the windows pouring,
The Prof. who now secured an axe,
Began to chop the flooring.
A good sized hole was quickly made,
The smoke came pouring out,
Yet so much water did they pour
It quickly put the fire to rout.
The problem then for them to solve

Was this:—"Where did it get its start?"
Investigation proved to them
The pipe had come apart.
That night the dirt all disappeared
The floors were all scrubbed clean,
And by next morning not a trace
Of any fire was seen.
And now due honor must be paid
To those who saved the Gym.
So to the High School Girls Brigade,
Whose buckets, mops, cool-headed vim,
And quick response to duty's call,
As fire patrol and signal system,
As pipemen, pumpers, fireman all,
As scrubbers, moppers, salvage corps,
We give our homage and our praise
"To-day, to-morrow, evermore."

A Freshman Tragedy

Eight maidens were coming in gayly from class,
Each maid from her class as the hour's work was done;
Each thought of the joke that was told to her last,
And scholars sat watching them all in their fun—
For maidens must giggle and teachers must scold,

Tho' no one knows why, and we've never been told,
And the bi-monthly card be lowering.

Eight maidens still giggled in Algebra class,
And whispered and laughed as the pupils sat down;
They looked for a "squall" which they hoped would soon pass,
For Sims then came rolling up 'fore, all a-frown.
But maidens must giggle and teachers must scold,
Though storms may be sudden and pupils be told
That the bi-monthly card is lowering.

Eight maidens went marching from class very pale,
In silence as tense as his wrath it was great;
And classmates were weeping with moan and with wail,
For those who had met with the terrible fate.
For maidens must giggle and teachers must scold,
And though it is awful, yet still are we told
That the bi-monthly card is lowering.

Eight maidens marched round the assembly room wide,
With pale sober faces and no trace of a smile,
Tho' bursting with mirth they scarcely could hide,
Throughout that whole distance that seemed like a mile.
For maidens will giggle and teachers will scold;
If not, this sad tale I could not unfold,
And leave the poor teacher still glowering.

Caroli Harmonis Et Walteris Hartlei De Bello Inter Iuniores Senioresque in Anno MDCCCC Historia

Omnis schola divisa in partes duas est, Iuniores Senioresque. Hi fecerunt signum, quod culmine scholasti aedificii posuerunt et complures adulescentes praesidio signo fuerunt, qui per totam noctem custodiverunt. Iuniores putaverunt non negligendum esse eis itaque concilio convocato exploratores miserunt, qui numerum hostium et naturam loci reperirent. Circiter quarta hora Iuniores certiores facti sunt ab exploratoribus, signum culmine tecti esse et hostes non videri posse. Prima luce nostri (Iuniores), locum constitutum advenerunt et aedificium intraverunt, ut signum eriperent; at frustra, quod interiores portae clausae sunt. Interim hostes in silvas se coegerunt. Subito (mirabile scripto) evolaverunt ex omnibus partibus, et in tectum occurrentes celeriter cum magno clamore nostros impetum fecerunt. Noster dux, cohortatus milites, signum proelio dedit et caeca nocte omnes concurrerunt ad hostes proeliumque commiserunt. Diu acriterque pugnatum est. Mox et nostri et hostes defessi vulneribus se receperunt. Iuniores in spe capiendi signum disiecti ad templum Presbyterianum convenerunt. Ibi conspiratione facta iterum intraverunt tectum. Magno labore portis refractis, ad summam culminen ascenderunt. Eo loco cum magno periculo malum shinmierunt,* et, dux Iuniorum, terribile visa, umeris unius ex suis fidelibus cominbus stetit, ut signum deprehenderet, tandem eo porti sunt. Statim victores laetum clamorem ad aethera tollunt et discendentes captum signum ante oculos victorum Seniorum cum magno gaudio portant.

*From verb shinmii—ire 4th conj. meaning to climb up

"Hoot! Mon!"

Did you see yon bright lad, just 'oot 'o his knee breeks,
Wha struts ay sae proudly noo' nae knowledge he seeks?
He kens far mair mair noo' than he wull e'er ken again
Tho' he lives his allotment o' three score and ten—

That's the Freshman.

Did you see yon braw chiel, wi' his e'en a' aglow?
To gude mainners and style, you are sure he's nae foe,
He begins to look owre the hame at the lasses
Yet a wee bit knowledge would gleam as he passes—

That's the Sophomore.

Did you see yon birkie wi' his heed in the air
Wha thinks wi' his class, there can nae ither compare?
He wants a keek o' Latin—a blink at Shakespeare
So afore his fair lass he may learned appear—

That's the Junior.

Did you see yon young man, wi' a scholarly swing
And his upper lip shorn o' the crop it wad bring?
To him there is an inkling, life's earnest and real,
And cries "Knowledge I maan hae to do my work weel"—

That's the Senior.

Did you see yon great thrang, wi' humane heart and hand,
For "sense and worth, o'er a' the earth" nobly they stand
Maistering a' life's tasks, what happiness greater?
Still their hearts fondly turn to their Alma Mater—

That's the Alumni.

As the Poets See Them

C. POSEY: "Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all."

J. GRIMES: "He who assiduously attends, pointedly asks, coolly answers, and ceases when he has no more to say, is in possession of some of the best requisites of man."

A. FOGLE: "There he sat, harmless and serene; a boy, but in a dream."

O. TRUESOELL: "The great law is, let each man become all that he is capable of becoming—expand, if possible, to his full growth, resisting all impediments, casting off all foreign and noxious adhesions, and show himself at length in his own shape and stature."

C. NELSON: "O how glorious when I can reach a Barber shop minor; then it is my soul pours forth its melody."

B. WEIR: "Patience, unmoved, no marvel though she pause; They can be meek that have no other cause."

F. L. SIMS: "Vini, vidi, vici."

P. BOKLUND: "Pa, gimme a cent; I want to be sporty."

D. BARNUM: "He gives to airy nothing a habitation and a name."

R. MEYER: "Upper rooms to rent she has,
Without furniture but with gas."

EONA FAIL: "And still they gazed, and still their wonder grew,
That one small head could carry all she knew."

M. NILES: "What pace is this that thy tongue keeps."

C. GOODYKUNTZ: "Nature has formed strange things in her time."

E. LUDLOW: "Why idlest thou thy time away?"

N. BRADLEY: "Loop up thy tresses escaped from thy comb."

S. McMILLAN: "He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit."

H. OLIN: "Shear me not of my hair, for there my beauty lies."

L. RUMELY: "I smoke and puff and strut enough for twenty men or more."

H. WEGNER: "Behold the child, by Nature's kindly law Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw."

G. LINK: "Behold, the naturalist in his 'teens Found six new species in a dish of greens."

A. RECHENBERG: "A solemn youth with sober phiz,
Who does his work and minds his biz."

"Miss Ludlow was walking,
And also was talking
With a gay Junior one day—
The Junior was gone,
But Miss Ludlow talked on,
Very much in her usual way."

S. HYNES: "Else here I swear
Young love may go,
For aught I care,
To Jericho."

C. WEBSTER: "Swans sing before they die; 'twere no bad thing
Did certain people die before they sing."

L. HALL: "It was audacious the work she'd do,
And the thousand plans that she'd put through,
* * the boss girl for all that, and don't you forget it."

J. S. MARTIN: "I know it is a sin
For me to sit and grin."

L. PHILLIPS: "Plague if there ain't sompin' in work as kind o' goes agin my convictions."

"The whiskers which Lee Phillips wears
Are composed in large measure of hairs.
That their hue he'll disguise
With some dark diamond dyes,
Is one of our most fervent prayers."

R. WICKERHAM: "I chawed on fur quite a spell,
Then I speaks up slow and dry—
'Jes' tobacker!' says I."

CARR BOWELL: "And so I plunk and plonk and plunk,
And rosin up my bow,
And play the tunes that make you think
The Devil's in your toe."

The LaPorte High School Alumni Association was organized in 1887 and since then each year, at the close of school, the society has held a banquet and reunion, which has been quite informal in character. A literary and musical program is given, a luncheon is served, informal dancing is indulged in and every opportunity is given for the members to visit and enjoy themselves in each others company. The Association has never attempted anything more than to bring the members together for a social time once a year. The gatherings are always enjoyable and many of the graduates travel many miles to be present upon the occasion of the reunion. The present officers of the Association are: Miss Fannie Scott, President; Frank Decker, Vice President; Edward J. Widdell, Secretary and Louis B. Weaver, Treasurer.

The Polar Expedition to Rolling Prairie

ONLY after calm and mature deliberation in a class meeting which was disguised as a combination of Sioux war dance, anarchist picnic, and Mt. Pelee in action, did the Class of 1903 decide to cool off their throbbing brows and heated brains by a bob-sled arctic expedition over the hills towards Rolling Prairie. Commissary and transportation departments were organized, variously, individually, collectively, vehemently, and elaborately instructed as to the details of their business and then promptly forgotten, as were the instructions.

But two bob-sleds with more than the usual quota of uncomfortable corners and gables were secured and a generous supply of India rubber oysterettes provided against the seven lean hours to follow. The expedition mobilized at the historic "Gym," each individual as closely resembling a mummified Esquimaux as the available supply of wrapping would permit. An evil fate hung over the expedition from the start. One Miss discovered she was sitting close to the driver, instead of the Prof., and fled to the other sled with smothered screams. A dearth of girls or a surplus of boys threw a gloom over one sled load which was dispelled only by the incense of Sweet Briar and Bull Durham.

Each division of the expedition shouted muffled orders to the other to "get the oysters" and "get Tommie," and neither paid any attention to the other. Thus it happened that both sleds called for Tom and neither for the oysters, both items being necessary to the success of the exploring party, as the Teeter home was the goal of their journey. Gliding gaily on, singing snatches of still unfrozen songs, rousing the rural denizens by a series of vocal explosions, by courtesy known as a class yell, oblivious of the great hunger which lay in store for them, the first sled went its way. Sparkling conversation, strained through three layers of shawl intermingled with "oxide of Dukes Mixture," was wafted back in curling wreaths as a trail for the others to follow. No incident save the shrill crescendo of a muffled screech as they lurched from side to side on the precipitous embankments, marked the progress of the first party. But not so with the second. Broken harness, an excited driver, skittish horses, and appalling yells, inspired alternately by fear of capsizing and exultant joy at having escaped disaster, lent variety and a zest of excitement to the journey. The audible features of the trip also served to send flying back in mortal terror to their beds, the curious and inquisitive country-folk, who had ventured out to investigate the hair-raising romps and to sniff wonderingly at the pungent trail of the preceeding sled. Scornfully ignoring the smoky trail of the pioneer sled, the driver of the second one steered by the stars and his intuitive sense of direction, thus prolonging the gaiety of the trip by half an hour while unknown regions in northern Indiana were explored in the hope of again finding the trail. Passing through an orchard the spreading branches gently scraped off all bonnets, hats, caps, wigs, spectacles, hoods, and other varieties of headgear, with the calamitous result that many burning thoughts were congealed and much sparkling repartee frost-bitten within the chilled and numbened pates.

At length the trailing party arrived at the Teeter home and their predecessors rushed out to institute solicitous inquiries as to the health and good spirits of the oysterettes. Then did the awful truth stand revealed in all its ghastliness. The oysters had been forgotten! Some raved, others merely tore their hair or that of the refreshment committee, others fainted, some wept, a few were speechless. Then there arose a babel of accusations and recriminations, a long discordant wail of anguish and despair which pierced the chilly air like the cry of a starving wolf. Fortunately for the sanity of the more hungry, some one — he was never identified, and for fear of a similar experience never confessed his identity—appeared at the door with a basket of luscious apples. With a frenzied rush the explorers bore down upon him, bowled him over, swallowed him up in a seething vortex of apple munchers, and forgot him in their joy.

But what is a class party without oysters? Verily like Hamlet with Hamlet left out. So it came that R. Wickersham and L. Rumely drove swifly back over the dark hills to sleeping Rolling Prairie in quest of oysters. Oysters they would have, and violently disturbing the peace of the village with a daring born of desperation they finally awoke the butcher and purchased his entire stock of two quarts. Heigh-ho, then for crackers! But of crackers, alas, there were none. Despondent, they prepared to return, but catching the glint of a light in a secluded structure they bore down upon it, and all unheeding, dashed into a saloon, on—on—forninst the free lunch counter, where behold, there were crackers, which they clutched with avidity. Tossing the astonished, white-aproned individual who presided thereabouts their remaining nickel, they fled into the darkness. How gay their return, how jubilant their song! But alas, yea, alas, once more! As they stepped from the sleigh they tripped, oh, alas! they fell, through, in and about, under and over, beyond and abaft, around and between those oysters, and “Oh, what a fall that was, my countrymen.” Gingerly, sadly, secretly, were those oysters picked up, more juice secured from the well, tell-tale evidence of the oyster baptism carefully removed, and then in triumph and with glad acclaim were they borne to the kitchen, and with high ceremonies delivered to the cook.

The unwonted mirth and festivities, the fun, the laughter, the jollity and the joy which followed in the swift-flying hours has no place in this sombre chronicle. So again to our tale of woe.

Returning, the absent-minded driver of the ill-fated second sled neglected to shift his quid as he rounded the corner near the orchard, and gravitation did the rest. Heads, heels, blankets, yells, spectacles, shawls, overshoes, Seniors, Professor, and more or less pertinent and polite remarks filled the air, all soon descending upon the downy snow drift near by to disappear gurgling, gesticulating, and screeching into its billowy depths. All save one—she lay cold and stiff, with a grim smile on her countenance, and a wisp of the driver's hair in either hand. “Peggy” it was, and a dampened, sorrowful cortege, plodded beside the righted sled as it entered Rolling Prairie. Then the mourners remembered that it was as easy to ride as to walk, the Professor regained his equanimity, “Peggy” revived with a query concerning the oysters, and the cavalcade proceeded on its melancholy way. Certain of the boys chartered a “One Hoss Shay” of a beguiling liveryman, which collapsed a few miles from the city, leaving them but the runners on which to finish the trip. At sunrise the party returned, the last farewells were sleepily said, and the survivors sought their couches, later to awake to meet the assessment levied to meet the party's bills.
